DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

2. Regarding claims 1-3 and 5, the phrase "such as" renders the claim indefinite because it is unclear whether the limitations following the phrase are part of the claimed invention. See MPEP § 2173.05(d).

Re claim 1: the term "such as" in line 3 renders the claim vague and indefinite.

Re claim 2: the term "such as" in lines 3 and 15 renders the claim vague and indefinite.

Re claim 3: claim 3 is dependent on claim 2 and therefore likewise rejected.

Re claim 5: the term "such as" in line 3 renders the claim vague and indefinite.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Swartz et al (US 5,923,835) in view of Ogasawara (US 6,386,450).

Re claims 1-6, Swartz et al discloses a system for assembling, accessing and maintaining a portable personal inventory comprising a hand-held controller device 1 providing data processing circuitry 58, a power supply 52; a display 4, a means for manual data entry such as a touch screen 4, a barcode scanner 56 for scanning barcodes, a software enabling the controller 58 to accept data input entered by the means of manual data entry, offering information in human-readable form on the display 4, which the software decodes by acting upon one or more custom databases, to be supplied by any of a multitude of sources offering preexisting databases or from purpose-built databases; a machine-readable memory store 55 including at least one integral custom-made decoding database; at least one dynamic memory storage area [EEPROMs/EPROMs/RAMs], the dynamic memory storage area storing one or more editable databases, including a plurality of inventory identification codes; incorporating software enabling access to the dynamic databases to allow them to be edited in order to keep them up to data and to allow them to be queried in order to display information for the user; a portal for digital communication whereby the controller may communicate with other devices via one or more of number of commonly used means such as a wireless link; at least one dynamic database not associated with a barcode translation database, whereby data relating to a multitude of household inventory items, entered manually or electronically, may be stored (figs. 1-4; col. 5, line 20 through col. 8, line 55).

Swartz et al fails to teach or fairly suggest that the barcode scanner enable to read Universal Product Codes.

Ogasawara teaches the above limitation with a hand-held barcode scanner 15 is a Universal Product Code barcode scanner (col. 5, lines 5-12).

It would have been obvious to an artisan of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to incorporate the teachings of Ogasawara into the teachings of Swartz et al in order to provide Swartz et al with a more universal system wherein the system can read/scan multiple types of barcodes.

Furthermore, such modification would have been an obvious extension as taught by Swartz et al, and therefore an obvious expedient.

Conclusion

5. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

The patents to Ruppert et al (US 5,424,524); O'Hagan et al (US 5,821,513); Tracy et al (US 5,979,757); Sherman et al (US 5,484,991); and Petrovich et al (US 6,101,483) are cited as of interest and illustrate a similar structure to personal inventory management system.
